Dasha Kiper's new book blends science and storytelling to illuminate the complex relationship between the minds of dementia patients and their caregivers. She talks with geriatrician and medical humanities scholar Dr. Justin Mutter about a new way to understand this symbiotic relationship.

Thursday, October 19, 2023

6:00 – 7:00 p.m. (EST)

Zoom Webinar: <https://uso2web.zoom.us/j/84251645196>

Koppka Family Foundation Lecture in the Health Humanities

Dasha Kiper MA was born in Russia, raised in San Francisco, and makes her home in New York. She first became a live-in caregiver after she graduated Columbia University where she received an MA in Clinical Psychology. For the past decade, she has counseled caregivers, led support groups, and trained and supervised mental health professionals, as well as former caregivers, who now lead support groups.
